

Archimedes

Ethan Williamson

Age: 28-35

Female - All Ethnicities

Program Director - small-town radio station

Ethan Williamson, known as the serial killer "Archimedes," is a former psychology and criminology professor. He targets academics—both teachers and students—who fail to meet his high standards. Living by stoic principles, he suppresses emotions, except for disgust and annoyance. He believes true growth comes only through suffering, and that those who have suffered are the only ones worthy of teaching others, provided they remain mentally and physically strong.

Archimedes has a very cool demeanor, and rarely betrays his poker face. He is also completely sane and aware of what he is doing, causing a great deal of stress and fear in the officers that have captured him. He's taken to pushing himself to become physically fit, mentally strong, and psychologically unmoving in his beliefs.

Voice: Archimedes' voice should be intelligent, cold, calm, and assured in every spoken word. This is a man that wholeheartedly believes in his philosophy, and that he is a hero that will pull humans up from the mud if they simply obey and listen to his reasoning. When speaking to others he deems unworthy he will talk to them like they are disobedient children, or misguided adults in need of reasoning.

Line 1: (Archimedes stares intently at Sato, a flicker of something unsettling in his gaze.)

“Tell me, Detective...have you ever wondered if true justice lies beyond the confines of the law? If a higher purpose might exist, even in the darkest of deeds?:

Line 2: (Annoyed at having to entertain visitors to your cell who want to see you in the flesh. You hate being treated as a circus act)
As delightful as the company of three new faces are, is there a reason you're choosing to harass me? I haven't done anything to violate your rules, Warden.

Line 3: (Discussing your philosophy. Your outlook on life is that suffering is necessary for people to enjoy life, and because of this people naturally WANT to suffer. Do this line like a professor giving a lecture)

Penitent monks. Martial Artists. Bodybuilders. Women wanting to be mothers. We suffer for what we want. It's why today's youth are faltering. There were no problems to suffer, so they made their own. They desire it. They inflict suffering without a second thought because it's not 'they' who suffer. They don't understand the ramifications of their actions. Exploiting their fans on social media for money, bringing newborns into the world they have no capability of giving a good or decent life, destroying people's reputations out of sheer boredom. They're desperate to understand. Even if they don't know it.
